

About Reed Library...

The Reed Memorial Library has been serving the Carmel community for over 100 years. The Library works hard to fulfill its mission to provide the community with free access to cultural, informational, and recreational resources and learning opportunities in a warm and welcoming environment.

Built in 1913 in memory of William Belden Reed, the Reed Library was beautifully and thoughtfully designed by the New York City architectural firm of Pryor and Gaylor. In planning the design it was emphasized that the structure had to house a library as well as provide a meeting place for the community. The architects succeeded in providing the Hamlet not only with a striking although conservatively designed Tudor Revival building but also with an exceptionally functional library that maintains its functionality to the present day.

The Library was constructed by the Miller-Reed Construction Company of New York City of which William B. Reed Jr. was a partner. Construction of the library was a labor of love for which the finest materials available were chosen and the work thoughtfully undertaken.

In 1980 the Reed Memorial Library was added to the National Register of Historic Places for its architectural significance.
